Being awarded by The World's 50 Best Restaurants™ is a huge achievement, not just for the restaurant which is placed, but for the broader industry as well. A panel of more than 1000 experts work through an audited assessment and voting process to produce an updated list each year. Since 2002 the awards have been a barometer for the world's fine dining scene.

This year, The World's 50 Best Restaurants awards, sponsored by S.Pellegrino and Acqua Panna, will be hosted in Antwerp in Belgium on Tuesday, 5 October. An extensive programme hosted in Flanders will culminate in the awards ceremony in Antwerp, and will mark a key moment in the ongoing revival of the global restaurant sector. In the lead-up to the event, today's unveiling of the 51-100 list showcases highly commended restaurants from all over the world as the hospitality sector continues its resurgence from the impact of the pandemic.

Peter Tempelhoff of Fyn, comments; “this is a real watershed moment for us, it means the world. And for the announcement to come at this time is huge. We’re really honoured, and I want to give kudos to Jennifer and Ashley and their teams – who strive to perfect everything they do. They’ve rolled with the punches throughout and they’re a phenomenal support to me.”

“When you consider how many restaurants there are in the world, it truly is a big deal. I hope this will prove to be a catalyst to reignite conversations about food, and get people out and eating in Cape Town restaurants again.”
