

Luxury supplier of hospitality furniture enters SA

Warisan, suppliers of uniquely designed pieces to luxury properties in the hospitality industry has launched its premises in Green Point, Cape Town. Headed by marketing director, Matthew Bater, the small studio showcases a selection of furniture across the company's ranges, including contemporary, classic, primitive, oriental and outdoor.

"It provides an opportunity for representatives in the local hospitality industry to peruse the range first-hand and receive advice regarding contract furniture. As the company also supplies residential furniture, accessories and lighting; having an on-site showroom also makes products more accessible for consumers looking for unique, custom-made pieces," says Bater.

Warisan, which means 'heritage' in Indonesian, brings more than 20 years of furniture crafting experience to South Africa and its neighbouring countries. "With such a strong emphasis on heritage, the company is committed to responsible luxury and only manufacturers products from plantation wood purchased from a certified sustainable plantation."

Plans to expand its digital presence locally are underway and will include the launch of a South African version of the international website, a Twitter handle and a YouTube channel.
