

Khulisa Social Solutions create 'Daring to Dream' movement

Paul Modjadji and Khulisa Social Solutions have partnered to create the 'Daring to Dream' movement to inspire, empower and enable South African children and youth to unlock their potential and develop skills towards building a positive future.

The movement will launch in Tembisa at the Phomolong Recreation Centre at 10am on 31 August.

Modjadji, an internationally acclaimed top dancer and award winner at the 2013 Talent America Showcase, in partnership with Khulisa's local offices, will reach over 10,000 youth in 10 different workshops to 11 September 2013 across Gauteng, Mpumalanga, NW Province, Free State and KwaZulu-Natal.

The workshops will include a motivational presentation by Modjadji, a testimony from local Khulisa programme graduates and an interactive self expression session and theoretically based workshop that will result in a local project being designed representing the collaborative dreams of the community.

Furthermore, to enhance the sustainability of each workshop, a local panel of stakeholders representing the departments of Social Development, Arts and Culture, local business and other parties will monitor the progress of each region through social media platforms.

This will be done with a view to reward the community that achieves the most. The underlying motive is to promote a spirit of entrepreneurship amongst youth through support, mentoring and corporate volunteerism.
