

Centurion Law Group offers mentorship for African start-ups

The Centurion Law Group is continuing its commitment to training and development with the introduction of its Business Mentorship Programme. This pro bono initiative will provide complimentary legal services to start-up companies and small and medium-sized enterprises.

NJ Ayuk, CEO of Centurion Law Group

The programme is designed to support young and innovative entrepreneurs with legal and business advice, including corporate structuring, labor and employment, and tax and customs issues. The pilot program will first be made available to businesses in Cameroon, with plans to expand it to other Centurion markets across Africa.

“African entrepreneurs and businesses can only reach their full potential when they are given the right legal support,” said NJ Ayuk, CEO of Centurion Law Group. “The dreams of African start-ups and entrepreneurs should not be put on hold, slowed or held back because of the lack of legal support. As a pan-African law firm, we believe we have an obligation to support them and we will provide that support.”

The programme is designed for entrepreneurs who want to know how to launch a successful company and navigate the legal and business environment of African markets. Eligible applicants can download an application form from the Careers section of the group’s website, www.CenturionLawFirm.com.
