

Omni HR Consulting announced as a 2018 National Business Awards finalist

Issued by Omni HR Consulting 23 Oct 2018

National Business Awards has announced its first round of finalists for the 16th annual National Business Awards in the Corporate Citizenship award category. Omni HR Consulting will compete against other finalists in this category for the winner's trophy at Emperors Palace on 15 November.

The awards recognise companies with outstanding performance in areas including sustainability, customer focus, tech innovation and fast growth. With its rigorous research and criteria, the accolade is recognised as a benchmark for business excellence.

Commenting on the achievement, Cassandra Julius, Marketing Executive at Omni HR Consulting, said, "We are exceptionally humbled to have been identified as a top-performing company. Being announced as a finalist is recognition of our teams' hard work, dedication, passion and willingness to make a difference in our communities we serve. We are committed to driving sustainable change and growth in the South African economy."

Through their recognition on the national stage, past National Business Awards finalists and winners have ignited the ambition of peers in their sector to pursue a similar high-water mark and Omni HR Consulting hopes to do the same.

"We are tremendously excited by the entries we received at the National Business Awards this year. For the first time we have added sector-specific categories, allowing us to celebrate the growth leaders across the South African economy. Helping us celebrate their successes on the night, VIP speakers Colin Coleman from Goldman Sachs, Bonang Mohale from Business Leadership South Africa and Asha Patel from Google SA will be in attendance. It really promises to be a stellar event," says Van Fletcher, Director at Top Communications and Media.
