And to survive to ultimate rush and mania of Black Friday, Fashion Stylist and Lifestyle curator Athi Myataza says, "South Africans need to get into the habit of dressing the part, a day like Black Friday could be long and exhausting so comfort is key. Less is more and leave the kids at home."

"Have an idea of what you want before you leave your home, stick to your budget and be mindful of December and January. Have a good sleep the night before to avoid being rude and impatient with people. Ladies, heels are disqualified on this day if you want to survive malls and the busy mall and shopping centres," emphasised, Myataza.

"For convenience and saving time, Telkom's Executive of Brand, Gugu Mthembu says, to make your Black Friday shopping experience better than before, check our website: www.telkom.co.za for affordable deals before making your to any store."
