

Schneider Electric appoints Taru Madangombe and Vladimir Milovanovic to drive African business

Schneider Electric has announced the appointment of Taru Madangombe as the new power and grid segment regional leader for Africa, and Vladimir Milovanovic as the new power systems vice president for Anglophone Africa.

As the former power systems VP for Anglophone Africa, Madangombe has gained a wealth of experience at Schneider Electric which will stand him in good stead as he drives the African business. He will focus on solidifying collaboration and customer engagement across country teams serving the continent.

Formerly hub leader for Anglophone Africa, Milovanovic will in his new role be responsible for Schneider Electric's Power Systems business in Africa while also establishing the company's newly launched sustainable (green) and digital ranges to optimise energy management on the continent.
