

Mobile growing as dominant frontier for online advertising

Mobile web traffic has increased from 20% in 2012 to 45% in 2015 and is expected to rise to 72% by 2020, according to IAB SA's internet advertising revenue report. With mobile traffic booming, digital advertising across these platforms is fast-becoming the most relevant way to engage with customers intimately and on their terms.

While access to data still remains a barrier in South Africa, the report notes that more affordable services, lower data costs and faster mobile data will bring more users onto mobile phones for longer. In fact, a 2015 Effective Measure study notes that 46% of South Africans using the internet have at least three cellphones in their household.

The industry survey, conducted by PwC and sponsored by the IAB South Africa, is in its third year of tracking digital advertising trends in South Africa. IAB SA CEO, Josephine Buys says, "These trends, along with the research we perform across our various councils, are compounded by the global intelligence we receive as part of the global IAB network. Overall we are building a clearer, more nuanced picture of which digital platforms and campaigns have the most resonance with consumers."

This knowledge filters down to the IAB SA Bookmark Awards 2017, which recognises pioneering talent in the digital advertising industry. John Dixon, Jury Chair for the Bookmarks says, "Our categories and judging criteria are a direct reflection of the challenges and opportunities in our industry. There is no doubt that mobile is gaining momentum year on year, and we look forward to assessing entries that use mobile to communicate in fresh, exciting ways."

One of these categories is Mobile Publications, which focuses on media intended for consumption primarily on mobile phones, including feature phones. As emphasised across the digital industry, content is key. Bookmark winning Mobile Publications should boast a simple, engaging user experience and have content tailored for the mobile market. Video and text is received differently across different devices, so entries will be rewarded for responding to this challenge with insight and intuition.

For those who haven't entered their campaigns or publications to the Bookmarks, time is running out. The final deadline for all submissions is midnight 25 November 2016.
