

Mercedes-AMG One spied testing at Nurburgring

About three years ago Mercedes-AMG announced its most focused model ever, Project One. After years of super saloons, performance coupes and sportscars wearing the Three-Pointed Star, it is finally time for a genuine hypercar to leave the gates of Affalterbach. As we see in the video below of Mercedes-AMG One spied testing at the Nurburgring that will be a reality soon.

For those who are unfamiliar, the Mercedes-AMG One uses a Formula One engine, from the company's record-breaking single-seater racecar, in a road-going passenger car for two. Continue reading the full story on Double Apex.
