Beacon of comfort

Rweqana, affectionately known as "Reverend Rweqana," graced the airwaves of Umhlobo Wenene FM from 2008 until her retirement on 31 March 2022, where she passionately served as a presenter for religious programmes. Her dedication to ministry extended beyond the microphone, as she took on additional administrative responsibilities, including the recording of devotions, prologues, sermons, and Imvuselelo.

Rweqana's shows included the now Ngenan Emasangweni Ngendumiso, a religious show that airs on Thursdays between 09:00am and 12:00pm and the iconic Ndingu Yehova iGqirha Lakho, where her midnight knocks and her trademark phrase "Nkqo, nkqo, nkqo, ndikwakho" were endeared by her listeners from 03:00 – 05:30. She had been a beacon of comfort and healing for many, and was inducted into the Hall of Fame at the Liberty Radio Awards in 2017.

Yawa, the brilliant mind behind the award-winning drama series Ithini Na Lento and a 2008 drama series that focused on reducing the fatalities of initiates caused during circumcision entitled Konakele phi?. He started with the station when it was still radio Transkei in 1995, where he published Ingalo Yomthetho Inde, a book that was adapted into a radio drama for Umhlobo Wenene FM by the former drama producer Zolisile Mapipa, and saw him winning the accolade of Young Radio Drama Award.

He later migrated to Umhlobo Wenene FM in 2007 as a freelance writer, where in 2010, he led a young group of writers that started the drama series Ubomi yinzulu yolwandle under the guidance of Thozamile 'Sir Thoz' Nyakatya and Ntombethemba 'Tofee' Zitshu. In 2024, the name was changed to what is now the popular drama series Ithini na Lento? in order to accommodate an evolving youth and storyline.

Sonwabo's creativity and dedication to storytelling, captivated audiences nationwide and extended beyond the airwaves, earning the series numerous accolades, including the prestigious MTN Radio Award for Best Drama Series in South Africa in 2014.
